Sixth Sunday after the Epiphany

RECEIVING THE LIGHT, BEING THE LIGHT, SHARING THE LIGHT

Both of today's scripture passages reflect on consequences and blessings. In Jeremiah, those who place their trust in human things are said to be like a withering desert shrub, whereas those who trust in the Lord will flourish like those planted by water. In Luke, Jesus blesses and gives hope of future promise to the poor, the hungry, the weeping, and the persecuted, while also carrying a word of warning for those seemingly satisfied. The prosperity that is so valued by the world is turned upside down by Jesus, who instead honors those who are weak and hungry.
